An Accessible Ecosystem

Meet NATIVE, an organization that specializes in helping hotels create accessible environments for people with disabilities. NATIVE—which stands for the Network of Accessible Tourism for an Inclusion Valued Economy—consults with hotels and monitors their progress toward accessibility in every stage of a traveler's experience, from check-in to check-out. This includes applying embossed braille stickers and door hangers to bed and bathroom features and elevator buttons, to installing cutting edge technology, such as detectable fire alarms for customers who are deaf. Accessibility beyond hotels is also becoming part of the touristic experience, a NATIVE hotel in Morocco, for example, now provides a specialized wheelchair for riding a camel so travelers with limited mobility can experience an authentic trek in the desert. It's true—read on!

The organization is the brainchild of Pablo Ramón, a tourism expert, who sprang into action after hearing a podcast narrated by a girl who was blind. She described her typical day in the big city, fraught with obstacles, yet spoke with a sense of humor. When she couldn't answer the question of how she would reserve a room in her favorite hotel, Ramón was struck by the profound need for greater accessibility in the tourism industry. He consulted with webmasters and software developers, and eventually partnered with a team of engineers to create an accessible website for people with disabilities.

NATIVE's website provides users of all types of disabilities with the capability to research accessible hotels and book reservations—by themselves. Navigation is done in numerous ways, depending on one's needs—blowing, emitting a sound, or touching any or several keys at the same time, as in the case of a customer with Parkinson's. The interface is designed to adapt and change to a user's preferences. This includes navigating via voice commands in several languages, managing different contrasts of background and text colors, and using the keyboard and headphone microphones. And soon from a totally refurbished web platform.

Facilitating accessible tourism through innovative online systems - NATIVE Hotels and Accessible Tourism upgrades global reference platform for accessible tourism

Accessibility is a cornerstone of responsible tourism policy. Tourism is a universal right that extends to all, including people with disabilities, the elderly, and families with young children.

Yet people with disabilities or mobility challenges are often unable to enjoy the same freedom to travel as most other people because of the way environments, transportation systems and tourism services are designed. Challenges may be encountered in every stage of their journey, from accessing information, taking local transport, finding accommodation, to participating in cultural or sporting events as participants or spectators. People with disabilities have equal rights to the spectrum of tourism services and opportunities, including independent travel, accessible facilities, trained staff and reliable information.

NATIVE's accessible tourism website

In light of this, the non-profit organization NATIVE Hotels and Accessible Tourism has created an innovative global reference platform for accessible tourism through its multi-language and accessible website, featuring an accommodation database and is currently looking for an online and global booking engine. NATIVE has been an industry pioneer in offering accessible hotels from an accessible website in six languages since 2010, thanks to the support of its partners InSuit, Implaser, Ability Magazine, Puntodis, Hearing Software, Sign-Lab, Fundación Oir es Clave and Fundación Tecnología Social.

In 2017, NATIVE's website was significantly improved, ready to include a booking engine, enhanced according to accessibility standards and features a wide range of specific infrastructure and services for clients with special needs, including, among others, swimming pool ramps, accessible boats, portable induction loops, vibrating wrist watches or special menus for celiacs. The site is equipped with the state-of-the-art InSuit web accessibility system, wherein users with disabilities such as Parkinson's Disease or arthritis are able to navigate the website easily just by blowing into the headset microphone, by emitting a sound, or touching any key.

The traveler with mobility challenges enjoyed the same freedom to travel as most other people thanks to accessible tourism in Ouarzazate, Morocco.

Additional and cutting-edge features are underway, including an eye-tracking system, which utilizes as an eyewink in lieu of a mouse click, as well as a new browsing solution with a new software format that allows for even greater accessibility for free.

Since its inception, NATIVE has successfully engaged 73 hotels in Spain, Portugal, Morocco, Italy and Mexico, to attend to the needs of elderly and disabled guests by either joining the network or upgrading their services to ensure a stay that is more accessible and comfortable. Looking ahead, NATIVE is poised to share its knowledge with other institutions and companies participating in the One Planet network, and is working to expand its model worldwide through an already existing global hotel and tourism platform. NATIVE is currently looking to partner with an online travel agency in order to integrate its work in its structure to make it the first online travel website offering inclusive and accessible information and services.

At a time when the demand for accessible tourism is growing, NATIVE's online platform represents a model approach to accessible tourism that embraces the opportunity to not only serve an important and growing market but also increase tourism revenue. With more individuals able to travel with universally-designed tourism structures and services, the tourism sector grows, enjoys longer seasons and generates more income.

ACCESIBILIDAD EN INTERNET

La accesibilidad en internet es un concepto que se refiere a la capacidad de acceder a la información en internet desde cualquier lugar y en cualquier momento. Esto implica que el contenido en internet debe ser accesible para todas las personas, independientemente de sus capacidades físicas o sensoriales. El objetivo es garantizar que todos los usuarios puedan utilizar los servicios en línea de manera efectiva y equitativa.

El acceso a la información en internet es esencial para la participación social y económica de las personas. Sin embargo, las barreras de accesibilidad en internet pueden impedir que algunas personas aprovechen los beneficios de la tecnología. Por lo tanto, es importante que los desarrolladores de software y los proveedores de servicios en línea tomen medidas para garantizar que sus productos y servicios sean accesibles para todos los usuarios.

Existen varias estrategias que se pueden utilizar para mejorar la accesibilidad en internet. Algunas de ellas incluyen: utilizar estándares de accesibilidad, proporcionar alternativas para el contenido multimedia, utilizar un lenguaje claro y sencillo, y proporcionar opciones de navegación alternativas. Además, es importante que los usuarios de internet estén conscientes de las barreras de accesibilidad y que sepan cómo utilizar los recursos de accesibilidad disponibles.

The Hotel

Strolling through the centre of Ciutadella which captivates us, we pass Tres Sants without even realising. The way this hotel blends into its environment with absolute mimicry. And at the same time chameleonic, as one only has to cross the threshold to enter a dream world, the walls covered in multicoloured frescoes or made of "marés", a stone from local quarries omnipresent in the island. On the ground floor a cosy reading room and a prim tea room with a fire place and old vaulted ceilings. On a lower level the dining room, giving on to a beautiful "patio" with a Washington palm tree, is the space for breakfasts which stretch in time. The coffee that accompanies the "ensaimada" (typical Balearic bun) asks to read the newspaper or a book, in no hurry. In the vaulted basement, a chromo therapy swimming pool like a medieval reservoir, and a space for sauna and massages is the favourite place to end the day. On the first and second floors, the bedrooms each different and unexpected, are an exercise of imagination and they are part of this dream topped off by the roof terrace, with privileged views of the Cathedral and the old town. The moment has come to listen to the church bells, the flapping of wings of the flocks of pigeons, or the discreet horn of the ferry reaching the port.
